

The movie industry should not have a special privilege to own fully-functional digital television devices. This would abolish the right of free citizens to own effective tools for employing digital content in useful ways. Hollywood and content producers must not be allowed to determine the rights of the public to use flexible information technology. The broadcast flag is theft.

James Ludwig